Who do you believe?

We are writing this as August is rapidly coming to a close. Fall and Winter are staring us in the face... and the pocketbook. (Do they call them that anymore? I am paranoid since discovering that most of the world had no idea who Pogo was).

I was pushed into this topic as we just heard another announcement on the radio that the Federal Government does not see any real possibility of inflationary pressure for the foreseeable future.

Someone isn't reading the tea leaves accurately.

We run advertising for a number of restaurants in several publications, including this one. Many feature specials in their ads or on their websites. Recently we have seen most increasing these specials - and their menus - by a $1.00 or so, not every month, but regularly.

One upscale restaurateur explained this simply: his food costs have gone up almost 20% so far this year.

Then on Monday last, I received a basic increase of "just 3.25%" on a bill we receive each month... and, of course the note told me how lucky I was...

That same day, we received word that our eblast provider was going up 'just' $5 per month... that's $5 on a $39 bill... 'just' over 12%. Again, the note told me how lucky I was.

The Moral on all this 'Luck'?

Shop quick (and Local), before something else goes up.
