Can it be that 2017 is half way to history?

Dave Allen

It seems that just yesterday we were all working on those new year's resolutions. I do not know how you have done with yours but the only visible one I have kept was to produce this column once a month – and if wasn't for my partner, ... well you know the rest.

Maybe this provides a clue to this annual ritual we call New Year's Resolutions... we need a partner, a friend, spouse, brother or sister... someone who pushes us, without offending.

They say that repeating a process 7 times can make it a habit. Maybe this July issue column will be that turning point.

But, back to 2017. It is hard to believe that Valentine's Day, Mother's Day, Father's Day and HarborFest, to name a few, are already in our rear view mirror. No, I am not lamenting the fact that half the year is gone. On the contrary the realization should encourage all of us to double up on our goals and effort to make this year all that we were looking for last December 31.

Here is one thought. If one of your goals was to get more involved with special organizations or events, maybe you could peruse this issue of the PW Calendar and find some organization or group that could use your expertise.... Like participating in the Twin Pines Charitable Community Thrift Shop. The folks there could really use your help, and you will feel better for your involvement.

Have a great second half of 2017!
