Thoughts On the Changes in Port

More and more locals are looking at the changing look or Port and asking which projects are positive and which are questionable.

Obviously, progress is always the term used for change. Yet it is worthwhile to stop a minute and reflect on the aggregate impact of the many local projects and changes in the business community have on our very special Port community.

The real question is where is the tipping point that changes our character? There surely will be one more project, one more building, one less retail store, one less access to the Bay, that will finally signal "things are now different".

I suppose the new apartment building near the Sportsmen's Club in Manorhaven is not terrible, but when you add in the huge building under construction behind Alpers on Irma, you see a trend. Maybe this new focus got underway when the Knickerbocker property was sold for condos.

Now we have more multi-story buildings either proposed or approved. This includes the huge development across from the LIRR station, the new Dejana building on the Manufacturer's Hanover Bank property, and most recently, the proposed redevelopment of Inspiration Wharf.

Where is Port's Tipping Point?

Cheers!
